Fund managers' comments

James Henderson

March was a negative month for the Trust in absolute terms and it underperformed the benchmark. The net asset value declined 2.0% on a total return basis (using debt at fair value) versus the FTSE All-Share which declined 1.8%. Within this, a decline in bond yields meant our debt was revalued upwards and this was negative for returns. Keeping debt at par, the net asset value declined 1.8%.

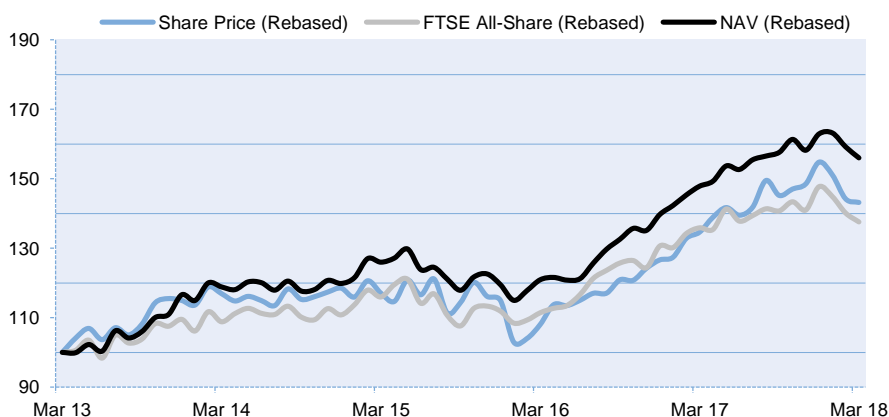

One of the largest positive contributors to returns was contractor, Interserve, which recovered from lows in early March after announcing an agreement in principle for refinancing the business, allaying concerns that the company would be unable to raise the capital necessary to continue operating. The largest detractor to returns was engineering company, Renold. The shares underperformed after the company issued a profit warning due to raw material price increases.

During the month, in the UK, we took advantage of weak trading days to initiate a position in Hammerson (luckily before the bid approach) and add to our positions in National Grid and Greene King, where the valuations are low and the problems are well aired. In Europe, we initiated positions in Deutsche Telekom, a telecoms operator, and Geberit, a sanitary equipment company. Deutsche Telekom is trading on a low valuation and should see positive earnings momentum as organic growth helps to improve margins. Geberit is a high quality and high return business, which provides decent organic growth prospects.
